4. Privacy who had recently returned from China having visited there on several previous occasions, began with an outline of recent Chinese history up to the present day. He described the Chinese Education system, Health Authorities, Industry, Housing, Wages and the Peoples Liberation Army. He also outlined briefly life in the Chinese Communes under Socialism. Every group of society had its peoples committee, eg: each schools committee was made up of party members, Peoples Liberation Army members, teachers and representatives elected by the students. Such a group discussed the running and organising of the school and dealt with any problems.

5. Privacy was clearly very impressed by the Chinese system. The group was then invited to ask questions and the meeting developed into a discussion on the day-to-day lives of the Chinese in every aspect, in particular on the new medical methods, especially acupuncture. Privacy mentioned that he had visited many hospitals, schools, factories and communes in various cities and had taken photographs of these which he then showed to the group on a projector.

6. Privacy asked Privacy if our society needed change and whether the Chinese methods would work here. Privacy felt our society was in desperate need of change and that the Chinese methods would work here. He then asked Privacy how he would achieve the change to which Privacy replied "by violent revolution". Privacy agreed.

7. A female member of the Communist Unity Organisation asked the Doctor if he was so keen on revolution what was he doing about it and did he belong to a Marxist organisation? Privacy replied that he did not belong to the Communist Party of Great Britain as he thought it revisionist and of no use. He did however belong to The Society for Anglo-Chinese Understanding, but appreciated this group's shortcomings, but added he had yet to find a party in Britain he could fully support".
