NOTE FOR Policy file

1. DCI Geoff Craft brought his successor DCI Ken Pryde, I introduced F6/[redacted] and [redacted] to them, on Thursday 15 September.

2. We had a short discussion on targets. I pointed out [redacted] Craft said that they were finding it difficult to penetrate, [redacted]

3. He said that they were putting most of their effort into the SWP which they reckoned was the most likely target to give rise to law and order problems. They claimed to be well placed in the newly organised CPE(M/L). [redacted]

4. I asked them whether they were thinking of trying to penetrate the WRP. They understood the matter was being discussed on high. They had not as yet been instructed to take this on.

5. Craft asked whether we thought there was any liklihood of Angry Brigade type activity arising in the near future. I said I thought that if it did come it would come from the [redacted], which we had covered. Craft thought that the remnants of the group reported on by [redacted] were still in operation and he also wondered whether the CPE(M/L) were in touch with [redacted].

6. We subsequently went to the Little Mayfair for sandwiches and a drink. It seems that Craft and Pryde are simply changing jobs. Pryde has been in charge of the administration of the Protection Squad. He has also been Edward Heath's escort.
