PRESS NOTICE

No cover name anonymity sought in respect of HN321

The Inquiry has received confirmation that the restriction order application over the undercover identity used by a police officer known as HN321 is no longer being pursued.

In his 'Minded to' note dated 3 August 2017, the Inquiry Chairman proposed that HN321's cover name should be released but the real name be restricted. In response to this, the Metropolitan Police Service withdrew its application to restrict HN321's cover name.

HN321 was deployed as a member of the Special Operations Squad in 1968 – 1969. He had the cover name "William Paul Lewis", although he has said that he was known simply as "Bill". He may have been encountered by individuals involved with the International Marxist Group or the Vietnam Solidarity Campaign in London at that time.

HN321 is not currently a core participant in the Inquiry. His application for a restriction over his real identity has not yet been determined.

Background

The purpose of the Undercover Policing Inquiry is to investigate and report on undercover police operations conducted by English and Welsh police forces in England and Wales since 1968. The Inquiry will examine the contribution undercover policing has made to tackling crime, how it was and is supervised and regulated, and its effect on individuals involved - both police officers and others who came into contact with them.

The work of the Inquiry ranges across the full scope of undercover policing work and will look at the work of the Special Demonstration Squad, the National Public Order Intelligence Unit and police forces in England and Wales. The Inquiry will also examine whether people may have been wrongly convicted in cases involving undercover police officers, and refer any such cases to a separate panel for consideration.

The work of the Inquiry will fall into three modules:

- 1. Module one will look at what happened in the deployment of undercover officers in the past, their conduct, and the impact of their activities on themselves and others.
- 2. Module two will look at the management and oversight of undercover officers, including their selection, training, supervision and care after the end of an undercover deployment. This section will also look at the law and other rules covering undercover policing.

UNDERCOVER POLICING INQUIRY

3. Module three will make recommendations about how undercover policing should be conducted in future.
