1. The following information has been received from a reliable source:-

2. "The latest membership figures for the International Socialists reveal that since January 1974, the membership of the organization has fallen from 3,300 to 2,600. The Executive Committee explain the decline away by saying that it is due to the failure of many branches to submit their respective membership registration lists. However, this would only account for a loss of about 100 - 150 members.

3. Recruitment remains high on the list of priorities within IS, but the latest figures have not brought about any strengthening of the already intense recruitment drive."
