

Factsheet

Purpose and scope

The Undercover Policing Inquiry was set up in 2015 to get to the truth about undercover policing across England and Wales since 1968 and provide recommendations for the future.

UNDERCOVER POLICING UNITS

Special Demonstration Squad (SDS)

The SDS was a unit that existed within the Metropolitan Police Service between 1968 and 2008.

The SDS differs from the National Public Order Intelligence Unit in a number of significant respects, two of which are:

- Because of its relatively historic nature, many of the SDS's former officers are now retired or deceased, and they were deployed against groups that no longer exist; and
- SDS officers tended to return to ordinary duties after a single undercover deployment and were not "career undercover officers".

National Public Order Intelligence Unit (NPOIU)

Around 1986, the Special Branch network set up the Animal Rights National Index (ARNI). The ARNI developed into the NPOIU in or around 1999. Around 2010, the NPOIU merged with two other units to become the National Domestic Extremism Unit.

The NPOIU's role was to manage all intelligence considered to relate to domestic extremism. Their work included carrying out undercover policing operations.

Modules and tranches

The Inquiry's investigations are broken down into three modules, with Modules One and Two divided into five tranches.

Module One Examination of the deployment of undercover officers in the past, their conduct, and the impact of their activities on themselves and others.	Module Two Examination of the management and oversight of undercover officers.	Module Three Examination of current undercover policing practices and of how undercover policing should be conducted in future.

EVIDENCE AND HEARINGS

The Inquiry's investigations will proceed through tranches in chronological order.

Before the hearings for each tranche, the Inquiry will publish to those participating in the hearings the open witness statements of those giving evidence and documents related to that tranche.

After each hearing day, the Inquiry will publish transcripts of the morning and afternoon sessions and all materials associated with the witnesses giving oral evidence on that day.
